Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Monday 08 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mostly cloudy. Rain in southwest. Drier and brighter in north.

Today:
A generally cloudy day. Mostly dry for much of the north of Scotland with a few brighter spells, particularly across the northwest in the afternoon where some sunshine may break through. Thicker cloud and rain across the southwest.

Tonight:
Dry with occasional clear spells across the Northern Isles and far north at times. Elsewhere cloudy with the odd patch of drizzle, more persistent rain at times in the west.

Tuesday:
Dull and cloudy with some patchy drizzle across south and central Scotland, mainly dry and brighter further north. Strengthening southerly winds bring heavy rain eastwards in the evening.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Remaining unsettled. Dry and bright in the east on Wednesday, but rain spreading into the west later. Cold with blustery showers Thursday and Friday, wintery on high ground. Breezy throughout.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.